Freyer, ens.

October 31, Je49.
further represent that a large portion of the population of this Territory are settled along the line of the routen above proposed: that in the opinion of your memorialista, great acceasions thereto will be made the approaching year, and that their convenience, as well as that of the Military and Indian Departments of the United States clearly justify the establishment of auch route.

Your memorialists therefore pray your honorable bodiea to es. tablish a mail route as above aet forth; and post offices at St. Anthony Falla, Sauk Rapids, the mouth of Swan river, Fort Gaines and Long Prairie, and that a mail be tranuported weekly in two horse carriages.

Your memorialists further represent that quite a large portion of the citizens of Minnemota Territory would be accommodated by the eatablifhment of a mail route from St. Paul to Stillwater in said Territory, a diatance of eighteen miles, and that the mail be carried thereon three times per week.

Aprrovid, the twenty-seventh day of October, one thossand eight hundred and forty-nine.
[No. 11.]-Memorin] to Congress for the inprovement of certuin roade thereis named.

To the honorable, the Senate and House of Representatires of the United States in Congress assembled: The memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Minnesota, reapectfully represents, That the road now leading from St. Paul, the head of navigation on the Mississippi river, to Fort Gaines, a distance of one hundred and thirty miles, and running through a rich and fertile country, capable of sustaining a large population, is owing to certain obstructions, particularly the numerous streams which it crosses, often rendered entirely impassable, so that it frequently occurs that the citizens residing in the vicinity of this road, as well as the military post of Fort Gainen, are entirely prevented from procuring even the most necessary supplies.

That the road from the Winnebago Agency to St. Paul, over which a large amount of government supplies are annually trangported, intersects the road at Aitkin's Ferry, on the Mississippi river, about twenty miles south of Fort Gaines, that the branch of the road leading to the Winnebago Agency is so bad, that the inhabitanta residing at that place, have for several months during the past year, been entirely prevented from procuring any supplies, excepting those brought by pedestrians. That in order to render these roads passable at all seasons of the year, thereby rendering the transportation of government supplies to Fort Gaines and the different Indian tribes in this vicinity, cheaper and more certain, and ensuring the speedy settlement of an extensive and fertile country, an appropriation from the General Government is indispensable. Your memorialists would respectfally ask, that your honorable bodies will appropriate the sum of ten thousand dollars for the purposes above set forth.

Afrroved, the thirty-first day of October, one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine.

