PREFACE

THIS volume contains all the laws, general and permanent in their character, now in force which were enacted at the sessions of 1915, 1916, and 1917. The arrangement follows the chapters and subdivisions of the General Statutes of 1913. The sections of the General Statutes which have been amended are inserted in their proper order. New provisions, which did not amend any section of the General Statutes, but which relate to the subject-matter of the chapter in the General Statutes, are inserted in the most appropriate place in the chapter to which they relate. Some provisions which did not relate to the subject-matter of any chapter in the General Statutes are made the subject of new chapters. By turning to the appropriate chapter and section in this volume, it will be ascertained whether the law as contained in the General Statutes has been repealed or amended, whether there has been new legislation on the same subject, and whether there have been pertinent decisions.

New sections are distinguished from the original or amended sections of the General Statutes by the manner of numbering. New sections have the same number, in brackets, as the last preceding section of the General Statutes, and the bracketed numbers are followed by numerals indicating the order of the new sections. Thus, the numbers [67-] 1, [67-] 2, [67-] 3, indicate that the sections are new and that they follow next after section 67 of the General Statutes. A new chapter is distinguished by its heading, which is inclosed in brackets, the chapter number being followed by a letter indicating the order; for example: [Chapter 31A].

Both the General Statutes and the Constitution, as well as the new laws, have been fully annotated by the editorial staff of the publishers with citations of Minnesota decisions covering 162 Northwestern Reporter. In order to save space in citing cases, the references contain the sign — to stand for the Minnesota Reports, and the sign + to stand for the Northwestern Reporter.

Particular attention is called to one feature of the annotations. At the end of each reading note containing the decision of the court is a reference to the topic and Key-Number of the American Digest, Key-Number System, showing where cases are classified in the American Key-Number Digests which bear upon the subject of the particular note. This will enable any one having access to the American Digest, Key-Number System, readily to trace other and later cases bearing upon the subject-matter of the statute.

Preceding the index will be found a table of the Session Laws of 1915, 1916, and 1917, showing the sections of this compilation in which the various acts will be found. An exhaustive index has been prepared by the editorial staff of the publishers.
